1. The Sarbo ( ) Graphite Mining Company at Yohyon-ni (126-26, 38-00) plans during 1950 to excavate 1,356 cubic meters, from which it expects to extract 4,000 metric tons of ore worth an estimated 240,000,000 North Korean won. To expedite this activity, a new water pump will be installed at the cost of 290,000 NK won.
2. The company employs 230 person (210 men and 20 women), of whom approximately 40 percent are members of the North Korea Labor Party. Their average wage is 700 to 1,000 NK won per month, and they are permitted to buy or are supplied through the company the following:
  - Coal (quantity not stated) at 230 won per ton.
  - Rice - 6 hours* per day for Class A labor, 5 for Class B, and 4 for Class C.
  - 2.1 tons of grain per day (of which 60 percent is rice, for dependents) priced at 70 won per small mal (7.5 kilos), with a market rate of 560 won per large mal (15 kilos).
  - Rubber-soled canvas shoes - four pair distributed free monthly to heavy laborers; market price is 470 won for men and 350 won for women.
3. Personnel employed at the mine include the following:
